“ This is my favorite memory of Ed Salesky. Jim and I were snowmobiling one really cold night. I did not have the right clothes for this or the right boots. I got so cold on that ride that my feet were frozen beyond the pain point. And it was a snowmobile that you couldn't do a 180 turn so we had to pick it up and turn it around to go back to the house. Ed was there. He saw how cold I was and knew that when my feet started to thaw, I would be in extreme pain. So he took off my boots, wrapped my feet in a blanket and then gave me a strong shot of ginger brandy and said "Drink this fast. It will make it a lot better." I did and it did. Thanks, Dad.
