“ I only met Al in the halls of Memorial High School. I introduced myself to him because he was subbing in the class across the hall from me. He told me his name, and we took it from there. I saw him in passing these past 2 plus years, and he always said hi, as did I. I had lunch with him in the teachers' lounge and that is how I really got to talk to him. He was always friendly to me. I will miss the big guy. I remember my last words to him were last week when we were in the teachers' lounge. "See you later, Al." And he responded, "Bye, John, have a good day." And that was it.

Mr. B was one of us. He knew the deal, and I took comfort in his attitude toward the teaching profession and his disposition when it came to young students trying to find their way. I never heard him raise his voice or show frustration. He was one of the first people I saw every morning as he walked in the front door with a dry wit, a coffee, and a smile. I'll be taking a little of him with me as I move forward and am thankful that our paths crossed.

I would always see Alan first thing when I came in for school. He would give his usual, "how are you sir", we'd chat briefly and get about our business. He never had an unkind word to say about anyone and was a true professional. A gentle giant. I was so saddened to hear of his passing. He will be missed.

I remember the first time Alan covered my class a couple years ago. He sent me an email stating he was covering my class and is there anything he needed for the class. He was always pleasant and greeted me with a smile in the halls. We would chat when he covered classes on the 100 hall. He will be missed by staff and students. Many of the students were sad to hear of his passing as well.
