“ When I worked at Digital Equipment Corporation as an Instructor, I had Ed as my Supervisor during a critical time in my career. I had a Student who gave me a critique that would have caused me my job. Ed, the man that he was, investigated and found out that this student was annoyed at his boss for putting him in the wrong class. Also the other 17 Student critiques were all between very good and excellent. Ed, being the man that he was, straightened the matter out with all the Managers involved, and I continued working at DEC until my retirement. Ed and I had a great relationship. There was never anything that I would not do for Ed. I will miss him, but I will never forget the man to whom I owed so much.
