“ I got to know Nikki around seven years ago, as a smart, stylish, good humored and even tempered front desk person. She was certainly smart and capable enough to do a more difficult job, but she was already doing the most difficult job in the world--a single mother. She wanted a schedule that worked around Emily's school schedule, that could take time whenever Emily needed it. Nothing was to interfere with that.

Nikki looked so forward to Tricia's moving up to the area, and her life did improve dramatically with Tricia's help. She looked up to Tricia more than I have seen any brother or sister look up to a sibling.

To Tricia and Dean, you have been amazing in your care for Nikki and Emily. Nikki was right in her trust in you.

To Emily, your mother gave you everything that was in her. When even that ran out, she passed from us. But not before she found you a loving and complete family to take care of you. She watched out for you as best she could while she was alive, and she continues to watch out for you now. You have grown obviously stronger and more mature over the past six months. It is fortunately rare that a person your age should suffer such a tragic loss. You are handling it with grace.

Please know that all of us want to help in any way that we can. Not just now, but forever. You are as much a part of our family as was Nikki.##imported-begin##Dennis DiPaolo, coworker##imported-end##

“ Emily,

I am soo sorry for your loss. When you and your mom stayed with me, I told you if you ever need anything, don't be afraid to call. That has not changed, even though it has been awhile since I have seen you. My new home number is 424-0679.

I know words cannot begin to heal your pain, but hopefully they can lend a small amount of comfort.

Be brave, Kiddo, there are many people who love you.

“ where to begin..well when i first met nikkii as a determined young woman who was quiet and reserved lying in a hospital bed, i had inadvertantly called her vicki and she grinned and said that's okay stew, i forgive you..myself, another staff member and nikkii chuckled so hard i thought the walls were caving in..to emily, your mom had nothing but good things to say about you and she was hitting this head on to keep going on for you..for trisha..you meant the world to your sister and she would just beam speaking of you..cudos to all you have done and i am sorry i never had the opportunity to meet either of you..she truly was a fighter and taught us all who took care of her many lessons in life..to take one day at a time for life is sooo precious..never give up or give in..you both have gained an awesome guardian angel !!! my thoughts and prayers are with the both of you and your families during this most difficult time..
"perhaps love is like an ocean, perhaps an open door..it invites you to come closer, it wants to show you more..and even if you lose yourself and don't know what to do..the memories of love will be love will be of you..for some love is like a cloud and some as strong as steel..and some say love is holding on and some say letting go..for some it means everything and some say they don't know..my memories of love will be of you.."###imported-begin###sue nicholas RN @ CMC D100###imported-end###
