“ Gram,

I remember going to the weekly dinners at your house when you lived in Litchfield and making us your famous monkey bread! Going on vacation with you and gramp to Maine before you moved there was always an adventure. We would go for picnics in the woods, fishing, searching for animals, raspberry picking and of course...shopping.

I remember waking up to the smell of your holiday ham cooking in the oven on Thanksgiving morning. The aroma was amazing, and mom and I always had to "test it" before we left the house. Once we were on the road to Dottie's we would joke about the year we finished dinner, and then remembered your ham was still in the microwave warming up. It never failed, we would always forget to put something out at Dottie's!

After we got back to your house we would go through the black Friday ads to get ready for (you guessed it)...a day of shopping.

*I love you, always
